

Hytec bolsters health team

Eynsham near Oxford, UK, 18 February 2010 – Hytec, part of OLM Group, has announced the newest members of its healthcare team – Keith Eyles and Tim Henstock. The latest additions will help Hytec to extend its coverage across the UK to help more healthcare professionals derive the benefits of service transformation and the information sharing agenda.

In recent months, Hytec has been involved in a number of early adopter projects to help healthcare organisations improve their efficiency and quality of patient care through enhanced security, systems integration and infrastructure management. The addition of two new personnel to its team will boost an already thriving business by enabling Hytec to engage with more trusts.

David Bryant, Hytec’s Managing Director, said: “We work with health trusts in the design and implementation of IT infrastructures that support good information governance, information sharing and flexible working. Healthcare professionals need to be confident that patient identifiable data is protected and that clinical applications are accessed through secure, stable and scalable platforms.”

“The addition of Keith and Tim to our account team will enable us to reach more trusts and help them to implement effective systems that support both clinical staff and PCT professionals in their day-to-day work.”

Both Keith and Tim will be responsible for account development at Hytec, discussing solutions that incorporate information security, mobilisation, systems integration and infrastructure managed services.

About Keith Eyles:

IBM solution training has equipped Keith to work in a variety of technology roles over the last 12 years, addressing both corporate and public administration markets. He previously worked for AVAYA Communication, Hobsons – a higher education software-as-a-service supplier, and several systems integrator resellers.

Having obtained an AS degree in ‘film production technology’ in the United States, Keith likes to write and direct short films. He also ran the London Half Marathon last year for the charity PLAN coming in at 1 hour 57 minutes.

Keith will be responsible for developing Hytec’s presence amongst Strategic Health Authorities (SHA), Primary Care Trusts (PCT) and Mental Health Trusts (MHT) in the south.

About Tim Henstock:

With 25 years’ experience in sales and marketing of IT solutions, Tim has spent the last ten years working with local authorities and health Trusts, and has previously worked for EMIS and CHKS.

In his spare time, Tim is a qualified FA coach and an active member of the local football community where he manages both children’s and adult teams.

Working with SHAs, PCTs and MHTs, Tim will be responsible for healthcare sales at Hytec in the north.

Part of OLM Group and operating from offices in Oxford, London, Glasgow and Newport, Hytec specialise in information solutions for local government and health authorities:
